THE EMPEROR

One can have no smaller or greater mastery than mastery of oneself. ...You will never have a greater or lesser dominion than that over yourself...the height of a man's success is gauged by his self-mastery; the depth of his failure by his self-abandonment. ...And this law is the expression of eternal justice.

ALCHEMY OF ARIES ♈

READY SET ACTION THE POWER OF "I AM"

At the Spring Equinox, the Sun rises in the constellation of Aries, marking the astrological new year, the starting point of our journey through the zodiacs. Aries the Ram represents the active fire energy that affirms one's identification of self, always charging ahead into new experiences on the quest to self-mastery!

Mythos — from the magical gold-haired winged Ram, Crius Chrysomallus, came the Golden Fleece that hung on an oak tree (or apple tree) in Ares' groves, the god of war. It is a symbol of one's right to rule the land and reclaim our birth-rites as sovereign individuals, as depicted in the story of Jason and the Argonauts. To attain the Fleece, he had to accomplish three tasks. To yoke and plow a field with the fire-breathing oxen, to plant dragons teeth and outwit the army that sprung-up from them, and to evade the sleepless dragon at the base of the tree. With the help of Medea, he accomplished the tasks and attained the Fleece. The Ram is a promise of the golden robe to come and the attainment of sovereignty and kingship over ourselves. We are now on this quest to attain the Golden Fleece

The Ram holds many impressive qualities and strengths; Power, Force, Drive, Energy, Virility, Protection, Fearlessness. Its highest expression represents the willingness to sacrifice one's life so others may live (the lamb of God, hence why the crucifixion and resurrection are in the spring). Arians express a pioneering energy. They do not resist taking the driver's seat and can come across as arrogant, but this is not true; they are only strong-willed. Charging ahead can lead to injury (or self-sacrifice) and, in doing so, become overcome by doubt; as a result, their courage, honesty and enthusiasm may turn into aggressiveness, rebellion and vulnerability. Fortunately, the level of mars(tian) energy is very high, and their instinctive and pugnacious side will not leave them helpless for too long, putting them back on the road to conquest and glory.

Arian power is a Cardinal energy (loves to start things, hard time completing) - fiery, active, energetic, enthusiastic, courageous, frank, bold, brave, competitive, fierce, independent, pioneering, ambitious, exciting, curious, playful, trickster, dynamic, adventurer, go-getter, optimistic, can be, strong-willed, risk-taker, dare-devil, self-absorbed, quick-tempered, reactive, impatient, impulsive, domineering, thoughtless, childish, but also, daring, protective and a strong warrior.
